Interview with Walter Reuther, May 12, 1963

Male Voice: What kind of relations, Mr. Reuther, does your union have with the Teamsters and what about Mr. Hoffa as a labor leader?

Walter Reuther: Well, I think that it is generally known that Mr. Hoffa is not exactly my ideal of the labor leader. I think that, like some other people, he's too concerned with making a fast buck, and I think that that does not belong in the leadership of the American labor movement. I think if you're interested in just making money, you should be on the other side of the bargaining table where the big money is to be had.
